Key Race of the Day – Race 6 – Starter Optional Claiming – 5 ½ Furlongs

The late double gets underway in race six, a starter optional claiming event for fillies and mares on the main track at five and a half furlongs. In terms of competitiveness, any of the five entered could win this race. #1 Dreaming of Hope is not only quick, but she draws the inside and has been lightly raced this year, with just two starts under her belt. She technically crossed the wire first in both but was disqualified last time out and placed fifth. Unfortunately, she was the best horse that day but was not clear when moving over and the disqualification was warranted. The inside helps her here and she could be tough if she shakes loose early. #3 Onejabtoomany was put on the shelf after her July 6th win. which is disappointing, as she looked as though she could've had a fruitful summer. Her two dirt efforts here have both been strong and she's been able to draw clear late both times. The waters are certainly deeper today, but she's the type that can stalk the pace and roll late which could be beneficial if anyone locks up with Dreaming of Hope. #2 Because is a perfect two-for-two over the main track here and could get a stalking trip as well. There are no knocks on her – she's done nothing wrong. Another major player in this field and it'll be fun to see her and Dreaming of Hope face one another for the first time.
